

Consequences of the mass media

Mass-media, i.e.<sup>1</sup> the means of mass communication, are creating a new world today. Actually all our life is based on news, information, transmission of events at the same time all over the world. This is possible thanks above all to television, but also to newspapers, magazines, radio and computers, which are now beginning to do the work, for instance, of post offices. You only need to

Boys without friends: the handicapped

The problem of handicapped people is felt today above all<sup>1</sup> in the primary school. Here, by law, normal children have to stay together with less lucky ones: they attend the same class, do the same tasks, and meet the same friends. To tell the truth it is not the children who create particular problems. On the contrary, handicapped children are accepted spontaneously by other pupils who do not consider them inferior or different, just friends like the others. X

Automation of work

When a society becomes technological and industrialized, the work it produces no longer needs man. There are machines, computers and robots which do the work instead of man. This is a good thing but also a bad one: it is good since work is done by machines and this means that man works less and can do other less tiring<sup>1</sup> things. It is bad because if there is always less need of men to work, then it will mean that tomorrow unemployment increases. ~~More-~~
